

RONALD MASULIS

Professor Masulis's expertise is in corporate finance, investment banking, international finance, market microstructure and financial institutions. Before joining the Owen faculty in 1990, he taught at Southern Methodist University and the UCLA/Anderson Graduate School of Management. He also has worked as an economist at the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

Professor Masulis's research interests include investment banking, optimal financing decisions, market microstructure, and international finance. His current research projects center on corporate governance, management compensation, merger financing, underwriting of IPO's and seasonal equity offerings, global equity offerings and venture capital. He publishes frequently in many journals including the Journal of Financial Economics, as well as in the Journal of Finance, Review of Financial Studies, Journal of Financial and Quantitative Analysis, and Journal of Accounting and Economics. His research is highly cited in economics and finance. Four of his articles have been designated as Journal of Financial Economics All Star Papers. Professor Masulis is a past member of the board of directors of the American Finance Association and the executive committee of the Western Finance Association, and has been an associate editor of most of the leading academic journals in finance.