Jota Ishikawa is Professor of Economics in the Graduate School of Economics at Hitotsubashi University in Japan. He received his B.A. and M.A. in economics from Hitotsubashi University and his Ph.D. from the University of Western Ontario in 1990. His specialization is in international trade theory. He has been working on economic growth, trade policy under imperfect competition, and trade and environment and has published numerous papers in professional journals including Journal of International Economics, Journal of Development Economics, and International Economic Review. 